Stephen Barkley brings over thirty years of experience in education to his consultations and seminars. Beginning his career as an elementary school teacher, Mr. Barkley is now executive vice president of Performance Learning Systems, Inc., the author of several educational books, and is an internationally recognized speaker.

Mr. Barkley's presentation will examine the instructional coach and principal partnership, assist in connecting coaching and student achievement, define coaching and how it differs from evaluation, supervision, and mentoring, and will aid in developing a strategy for differentiating professional development with teachers.
